

We Want Some Good News!

If you receive a newspaper in your home, you have probably noticed that often the headlines are filled with bad news: stories of war, drugs, crime, and disasters. Caring people and their good works may not always make the headlines, but they can make a difference in the world.

Making Bad News Good

The newspaper headlines and articles below tell news of problems in the world. How could you help fix these problems? On the lines next to each item, write a new headline to describe what might be done. Share your good news with your classmates.

Homeless Shelters Short on Food!

During the holiday season, food pantries are often full of food. During the rest of the year, supplies sometimes run low.

Bullying Increases at Local Schools

Bullying problems have become more common at many local schools. There is a meeting tonight at City Hall to discuss the problem.

Nation's Landfills Nearly Full!

The average person in the United States produces more than four pounds of trash per day. Altogether, we make more than 200 million tons of waste each year.
